Kids Books: When children ask questions they grow smart! (School and Education)

This children's book deals with one of the most interesting children's question, that one, about God.

One summer day a leaf fallen from a tree, for no real reason... The boy does not stop asking Why? How? Who is to blame?

This is a story about a little boy who found on a sunny afternoon a small lad sees a leaf falling from a tree. Curious, he asks the leaf what made it fall and the leaf replies that his home branch shivered and shook making the leaf fall. Still curious the lad asks the branch why, not even autumn yet, did the leaf fall, to which the branch answered that it was the fault of the wind blowing too hard. The inquisitive lad asks the wind the why question: the wind replies the angel instructed him to blow. Remaining curious the boy calls to the angel requesting an explanation for the trauma to the fallen leaf, and the angel shares that it was God's command. The lad looks up to the sky and asks why God made the leaf fall and God opens the child's mind to a little miracle - it all happened to protect a little worm who asked for help from the elements by having the leaf fall as a cover. And the little boy's curiosity is satisfied.

The story is intended to encourage curiosity in children, and it does that with a nice story with a satisfying ending.
