The Sugar-Plum Song Book Christmas Songs Collected by Jean Chapman

The Sugar-Plum Song Book is 32 pages of Christmas Songs collected by Jean Chapman and illustrated by Deborah Niland.

The history of carols is old, older than the first Nativity, and although some are still sung during the different seasons of the year, we tend to associate the best loved with Christmas, traditionally celebrated from the eve of Jesus' birth to Epiphany when Mary showed the Babe to the Magi.

The Twelve Days of Christmas - the festive days became an intrinsic theme for this book and its companion, The Sugar-Plum Christmas Book, with its traditional and contemporary stories, its verses and activities and other carols which are pertinent to Christmas and small children. The two books are planned to complement each other, but they may be used separately.

Margaret Moore, a specialist in children's music, has arranged each carol to the limited singing range of young voices. Guitar chords have been included, or suggestions for percussions accents, using either conventional or improvised instruments, but as carol singing is often spontaneous, natural and lively accompaniments are likely to be hand clapping, thigh slapping or feet tapping.
