Written by a philosopher of mind and seasoned researcher of religious practice, Atheism Bites: 100 New Atheistic Aphorisms is a compilation of witty, bite-sized chunks of atheistic philosophy that will provide you with a new flavor of food for thought and a quick reply to any argument against those who challenge your skepticism. In the subtle aphoristic aftertaste you will find a different way of criticizing religion: from within, oftentimes turning the possibility of God's existence against itself with unbridled irony.

Intelligent, complex, sardonic, fun and deeply ironical, Atheism Bites: 100 New Atheistic Aphorisms is a treasure trove of new thoughts and perspectives on the irrationality of religious belief:

- "To be an atheist is to have faith we are capable of better gods."
- "Even typographically, all you need to turn immorality into immortality is a cross."
- "Religious conversion is a process of sublimation by which a belief transitions from the doubtful to the dogmatic without going through the plausible."
