What if a trail of evidence suggests that Jesus of Nazareth did not die in his thirties? What if everybody is wrong about his ministry having lasted three-and-a-half years? At what age did he really die? Would it surprise you to know he was not even in the Holy Land one-fourth of his life?

Is tradition for a Friday death and Sunday resurrection consistent with the facts and figures of history, or has a minority always been right in saying he was put to the cross on a Wednesday? Could the nativity never have been in winter – voiding Christmas? What mystery shrouds the star in the east so as to be utterly invisible to the very Jews for whom it was supposed to be a sign from heaven?

Does knowing such things, in this internet age, still even matter?

See how threads of answers weave together to form a canvas upon which a grander portrait of Messiah emerges. Bible investigator and award-winning academic Edwin Arceo, uniting the disciplines of archeology, history, theology, language, astronomy and mathematics, will take you on a step-by-step journey to one compelling calendar day: the date of Jesus' birth precise to the day and year!

This well-researched book will both shock and instruct, intrigue yet edify. Whether he be the object of your personal curiosity, academic study, or religious veneration, be prepared to see the man you thought you knew in an all-new light. This could very well be the book Dan Brown will be getting his ideas next!

What else, Edwin Arceo's writings will put Messiah's work in its proper context in relation to the larger dealings of the Divine with rebellious Israel and the subsequent rise of the ekklesia of the Gentiles. Whether from the King James or Douay-Rheims, unearth the evidence and gasp in awe for not having known better what those familiar Bible passages have been trying to reveal all along. This is first-class textual-hermeneutical detective work nowhere else seen in a long time!

Share in the sense of wonder as you discover how every major event in Messiah's life followed a mathematical design, happening with awesome timing, and coming right on time.
